

THURSDAY, MAY 24, 1744.

Turin, May 9.

THE Combined Army is not much at Ease in the County of Nice, where they are so cooped up, that their Troops are canton'd very inconveniently; and as to Provisions, they are now as much distressed as ever; and so must continue, while the English are on the Coast. It is reported, that his most Christian Majesty is determined to fortify both Nice and Villafranca, as completely as is possible; and for this Purpose, several Engineers are coming from Paris. Oneglia is in a good State of defence, if the Enemy should attack it; and is so situated, as to admit of great Assistance from the English Fleet. It is, however, far from being improbable, that the combined Army may take it, as they forced the Retreatments at Montalban but with little Profit to themselves; since, according to authentick Hospita-Lists, they have 7913 Sick and Wounded in Nice and Villafranca, besides 3500 actually killed in the Action. At this Rate, the Passage into Piedmont cannot cost them less than 12,000 Men, and the best Part of the Summer. Add to this, that about Autumn the French Troops in Italy are subject to Disasters, and it will appear, that their Conquests on this Side are not likely to be greater this Year than they were the last, when they acted first with a combined Force.

Hamburg, May 22. After all the different Reports read as to the Disposition of the Czarina, the best light we can obtain as to the System of Russian Policy at present, is from her Declaration to the Imperial Diet at her first Audience; which was to this Purpose. That her Majesty would, in all Conjunctions, shew herself a sincere Lover of Peace, and punctual in the Execution of her Treaties. That in the present Disturbances of Europe, she would maintain a strict Neutrality, as suited best with her own Inclination, agreeing with the Interest of the Empire, and no Way derogating from her Alliances. That she sincerely wished a general Restoration of Peace, and should gladly contribute to it, as much as in her lay; with which Resolution, she desired he would acquaint the Emperor, his Majesty. Our private Letters from the same Court inform us, that her Imperial Majesty does not at all lose sight of the Affairs of the Marquis de Botta; which was the Court of Vienna inexpressible Trouble. Orders have been actually sent to a Squadron of Gallies and Frigates to sail immediately for the Coast of Livonia, in order to bring back the Russian Troops in that Kingdom; which are to be quartered, for the present, in Lithuania.

Munich, May 21. His Serene Highness, our Elector, as is determined to preserve a strict Neutrality, so he is firmly resolved not to suffer his Subjects to be treated in a Campaign, as they were last. It is with this View he has caused our Fortifications to be repaired, drawn Garrison of 5000 Men into this City, and is taking all imaginable Caution to prevent being surprized. We are laying up great Magazines; but whether for our own Use, or not, Time alone can determine. On the 17th M. Coigni was at Germersheim, to confer with M. de Seckendorff, where the Plan of Operations for the ensuing Campaign was absolutely adjusted. M. de Seckendorff had formerly another Affair with this French General, when he commanded the Forces of the late Emperor, Charles VI. It is reported, that they are to be on the Defensive, till the Event of the Campaign in Flanders quickens their Motions, and affords them an opportunity of penetrating, once more, into Bavaria. The Imperial Party in the Dyets is still very strong, and M. Coigni perform his Promise of assembling, in a Month's Time, 80,000 Men, we may yet see the Flame of War blaze higher than ever in Germany. We esteem it a Thing certain here, that his Prussian Majesty will maintain his Neutrality strictly; tho' it is very well known, he has the Emperor's Interest very much at heart, and looks on the Restitution of his Hereditary Dominions, as a necessary Step to restoring the Tranquillity of Germany.
